Great reads at the Baltimore Book Festival

Eager readers: Above, Mimi Adams, 4, left, her sister Sophia Adams, 9, and Elsa Graf, 6, all of Baltimore, delve into their books right away at the Baltimore Book Festival in Mount Vernon. After a soggy start on Friday, the rain held off Sunday afternoon, allowing book lovers to enjoy the final day of the festival, which also featured talks from authors Laura Lippman, Sherman Alexie, Common and Terry McMillan. At right, Tim Ervin checks out a book at the Bargain Book Warehouse booth, a popular spot for festivalgoers on Sunday.
